Dear Parents/Carers,

Re: LFT (Lateral Flow Testing)

I've heard on the news that families of school aged children can now get Lateral Flow Tests, is that right?

Yes. As of the 1st March, families and support bubbles with children are being encouraged to test themselves twice a week with the lateral flow tests.

It's recommended that adults and their children of higher education age take the tests, which are aimed at those people who aren't experiencing any symptoms, but may still have the virus. It also applies to the adults in households with primary or secondary school children and/or staff. The tests are available to order online via: Order rapid lateral flow home test kits.

Alternatively you can collect them from a collection point near you by putting in your postcode Find your nearest home test kit collection point

Kind Regards,
